Stanford Basic income Lab (BIL)

In February 2017, I launched a research initiative under the umbrella of the Center for Ethics in Society called the Stanford Basic Income Lab. The lab provides an academic home for the study of Universal Basic Income as a measure to alleviate poverty and inequalities. BIL hires graduate and postdoctoral fellows who produce research on UBI, advises those developing UBI policies and carrying out UBI experiments, aggregates and disseminates research findings, and convenes scholars, policy makers, and leaders in business, think tanks, nonprofits, and foundations around the Philosophy, Politics and Economics of UBI.

Grant secured and managed for BIL

- 2019 - Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Grant - $200,000
- 2018 - Jain Family Institute Gift - $60,000
